League June Price Is 14c Above May

New York, July 14—Members of the Dairymen's League Cooperative Association, Inc., will receive 14 cents more per 100 pounds for 3.5 milk produced in June than was paid in May, and 28 cents more than the return in June, 1932, according to an announcement by the League today.

Producers delivering to Class A volume plants will receive payment for their milk on a basis of $1.29 per 100 pounds at the 201-210 mile zone. Those delivering to Class B volume plants will receive payment on a basis of $1.27, and those delivering to Class C volume plants will receive $1.23. Producers delivering to plants which have not earned the volume differential will receive payment on a basis of $1.17.

Approximately half of the dairymen marketing their milk through the Dairymen's League deliver to plants that have earned the volume differential by building up the volume to a point that makes possible a highly efficient operation. Lowering of plant costs in this manner brings an increased price to the farmer.

Golden Rule Sale Day To Be Held in Addison Mon., July 24

Thirty Addison merchants co-operating in offering many bargains to visitors on that day—"Lucky Dollars" will bring happiness to many fortunate persons at the sale—Blue cards feature the event.

Monday July 24, will be Golden Rule Sale Day in Addison, and people from a radius of twenty-five miles will be coming here to shop. Golden Rule sales have been held in Addison at intervals for approximately twelve years, and residents of a widespread area in the southern tier of New York and the northern tier of Pennsylvania have come to know that Golden Rule days are bargain days in the fullest sense of the word. This edition of the Advertiser is filled with advertisements of the progressive Addison Merchants; business houses that are offering a wide variety of bargains which, taken together make up a greater sale than any single firm could present the public.

The thrifty person is fully aware of the fact that the prices of practically every manufactured article has started to rise with the inflation which is accompanying the "New Deal." This is only a start, but persons who are closly watching conditions, are sure that prices of all commodities will surely rise to far higher levels than have ruled for many months past. In the face of this certain advance, Golden Rule Day is presented by Addison merchants as a bright opportunity to save on even the low price levels at which their goods have sold during depression times.

In addition to the bargain carnival, Addison is offering visitors many attractions and money earning stunts on next Monday. The sale might well be called a "Lucky Dollar," day for many persons will get dollars for nothing, and others will get many dollars worth of merchandise without effort on their part.

Many persons will get dollar bills Monday afternoon, by merely asking someone for them. This stunt will be put on at 3:00 p. m. sharp. At that hour persons will be circulating around in Addison stores who will have free dollar bills in their pockets. Whoever steps up to one of these persons and says: "You have a dollar bill for me, will you hand it here?", will receive the dollar. Of course, the identity of the persons who will be carrying around these "give away dollars," will be kept secret, and the only way to find the right person will be to ask everyone in sight. This is a case of the first ones asking the "Dollar Givers," in the right way, the first receiving.

Then their will be "Lucky Dollars in cash drawers of many Addison merchants. Merchants will display the serial numbers of these bills in their windows. Anyone receiving one of the "Lucky Dollars" in change can get two dollars in trade for it.

An event for which the kiddies will wish to come a long ways to share in, will be the dog race. This event is open to youngsters under thirteen, and their dogs. The dogs will be lined up along Addison Main Street, held in check by assistants to their owners. The owners will be at the finish line calling to their pets. At a given signal the dogs will be simultaneously released and the first reaching the finish line will earn for his young master a fine box of candy.

Many other novel stunts and entertainments are being arranged by the committee to keep people busy and happy during the time they spend in Addison nex Monday.

Be sure to come. Come in the morning and bring your entire family to this great event. Golden Rule sale prices will not be duplicated for decades to come. Provide for the future by attending this sale.

All Addison Business Places participating in the Golden Rule sale will display a blue card in the window. Watch for the blue cards.

The following merchants are cooperating to make the day a success:

Grange Bros. , American House, L. E. Handy, Tyson's Hawkins and Hill, Sherwood Harness Co., S. D. Mac Lowell Co., Davis Clothing Co., John E. Chart, Red and White, J. S. Park Lumber and Supply Co., LaGrange, Sackett and Taber, Pepper, Dykins the Photographer, S. C. Erwin Wall Street Garage, Sprague Mills, B. E. Mullaney, A. and P. Tea Co., Steuben Tire Co., M. G. Hubbs, Buff's Lunch, E. Sareen, Wilcox Auto Service, Frank Hess, Addison Bank, Freddie Doddato Shell Station, John W. Russ, Leonard B. Hoaglin, and the Gas and Light Co.

John W. Russ Purchases The Auringer Block in Addison

An important real estate transaction was completed in Addison late Wednesday afternoon when John W. Russ purchased the Main Street brick block owned by Dr. H. E. Auringer. This store is now occupied on the first floor by the Grange Bros. Shoe Store and by Dr. Auringer's offices on the second floor.

Mr. Russ stated to an Advertiser representative last evening that he planned to move his auto parts stock into his new quarters either the first of August or the first of September. He is planning to remodel the store, putting in a modern glass front with enlarged space for window displays, which will be a fine improvement to Addison's Main Stret. Mr. Russ decided to purchase the Auringer block at this sime because his business has outgrown its quarters in the Orr block. He intends to add new lines to his large stock of auto parts and accessories, but the limited space in the Orr block necessitated his moving into larger quarters that will accomodate his enlarged merchandising plans. Mr. Russ has just been appointed distributor for the E-Mark storage batteries, manufactured by the Thomas A. Edson Company.

Mr. Russ is an example of the home boy who was able to make good in his own town. His boyhood was spent in Addison. After finishing school he spent a number of years with his brother Max, learning the auto repairing trade from the ground up. He then spent five years in the Davis Garage at Ithaca, resigning a position as foreman of the repair department to return to Steuben County. For several months he was again with his brother Max Russ, acquainting himself with the details of the latter's large wholesale and retail auto parts business in Corning, before embarking in the same line at Addison. Mr. Russ opened his store in this place in June, 1932, and the volume of business has so far exceeded his expectations it is now necessary for him to move into new quarters in a little over one year's time.

The Grange Bros. stated last evening, that they expect to move their shoe store into some available block when Mr. Russ desires the building vacated. Dr. Auringer has taken a lease of the second floor from the new owners.

Hold-up Men Rob, Beat Victim At Woodhull

A daring holdup occurred about one half a mile from this village on the curve of the Woodhull-Addison highway by the Edgar Ackerman farm one evening last week.

Marino Bennedetto, 30, was held up, robbed and beaten as he was returning to his home in Hornell from Elkland, Pa., where he is director of a band and gives music lessons.

As Mr. Benedetto neared the curve an automobile with three occupants came up behind him, drove across the road forcing him to stop. He started to put up a fight but was subdued when struck in the back of the head wtih the butt of a revolver. He suffered a cut on the head, a knee injury, cut lip and a wrenched shoulder.

While one covered him with the revolver, the other two relieved him of $103. in cash, a diamond ring valued at $150. a stick pin valued at $100. and a wrist watch valued at $55. Mr. Benedetto pleaded with the men to return the pin as it was a gift from a brother but they were unwilling to do so.

He believes he recognized the men and says they were from Hornell. They were driving a 1928 Buick sedan.

KIDNAPING OUTRAGES

The increase in kidnaping outrages is an outgrowth, direct and simple, of the era of shut-one-eye lawlessness that has swept over the country during the past ten years. It is a concrete example of the beautiful lady who petted and nurtured a tiger cub, until the cub grew into a huge beast and devoured the lady.

Thousands of officials throughout the country assumed the attitude of shutting one eye, whenever they saw violations of a law they knew to be unpopular with certain classes. Other officials sensed an opportunity for easy money, and began demanding pay from the law breakers, for shutting their eyes on law violations. Step by step there was built up in every large city in the land, a machine for defeating the law. At the bottom could always be found the group of ruthless gangsters, in the middle were the crooked officials and at the top there was invariably the political boss, ruling like an all-powerer overlord.

One kind of fuel was needed to keep steam up in the boilers of this infernal machine—money.

Without money the crime machine would have snuffed out like the spent loop of a dropping skyrocket. Money was needed to run the booze trucks; money was needed to pay the rat-eyed gunmen; money was needed to keep the gang chieftain and his inner council in king-like splendor; money was needed to make regular payments to crooked police; and above all money was needed to keep favor with the political chief of the city or district.

This insatiable need for money caused the gang business to increase with mushroom-like speed. Fresh with their triumphs at bank robbing and bootlegging the gangsters turned to the multifarious field of racketeering. Soon gas station owners, contractors, truckmen and mechanics were paying toll into the ever widening pool of filthy lucre, the shores of which were lined with eager, thirsty politicians, crooked officials, ruthless gunmen. The next road to easy money was of course, the kidnaping racket, and with the flush of victory in other fields the gangsters have hailed it widely as a sweet source of "sugar".

Since the police of New Jersey fell down so miserably in dealing with the Lindbergh kidnaping, no person of means has been safe in this country—the "Land of the brave and home of the free".

And now it looks as if the tiger cub had grown large enough to take a juicy nibble out of the "Lady's" trim ankle. For lo and behold the kidnaping ring has had the effrontery to turn against a political family for a victim. Possibly the O'Connells are strictly honest politicians. Perhaps the Democratic rulers of the city of Albany are above dealing with gangsters and racketeers—no one, except those on the inside knows for sure, and they will not tell.

All we can judge by is the evidence that has come to the surface. It is known that Albany has been the seat of the rotten base ball gambling pool which has flourished year after year, taking blood money from the public. Perhaps the O'Connells know nothing about that, and then again perhaps they do. They are not telling any of these things, in spite of the fact young O'Connell fell into the grasp of a kidnap ring.

When the Public really becomes conscious of the danger that threatens; when people awake to the end general lawlessness is leading us to, then may we hope to see an aroused populace arise to demand enforcement of just laws, and removal of obsolete laws from the statute books. Unless we as a people do awake to the need of law and order, we are facing the disintegration of our national life, just as surely as the old Roman Empire went to pieces after the reign of Nero.

Kidnapings are the most dastardly outrages conceived by man, yet we have brought them on ourselves by our disregard for certain laws—unpopular laws for some.

DRUGS AND DRUGGISTS

The National Recovery program supposedly carries with it "a new opportunity for self-government", according to an official statement. Many of the industries are finding a good deal of difficulty in readjusting their affairs to meet the complicated conditions. For instance, there are thirty-seven chemical, drug and allied organizations, and they shelter the most terrifically competitive industries in the United States. The conflict in the retail drug business extends generally through cities and towns.

The legislation by Congress furnishes many opportunities for industries to stabilize their programs and eliminate unfair competitive practices. The drug industry is furnished an opportunity to rid itself of that part of its tradesmen that are denounced by President Roosevelt as the "destructive ten per cent" practicing unworthy and unfair trade methods.

It is sincerely hoped by all legitimate dealers in drugs and drug sundries, that the newly created alliance in the trade will serve to eliminate many of the unfair practices which have tended to make everyone in the trade miserable.

SEEKING HUEY LONG'S SCALP

Reopening of the Senate investigation into Senator Huey Long is being sought from several directions. Women of Louisiana are among the petitioners seeking Huey's scalp. So is the persistent John M. Parker, once Governor of Louisiana and once candidate for vice-president as Theodore Roosevelt's running mate. So is a magazine which sent its associate editor and political investigator, Walter Davenport, to Louisiana to sift all the varied charges and allegations made against the Kingfish.

Mr. Davenport appears to have dipped his pen in fire and brimstone for the series of articles which he is writing about the Louisiana Senator. The current charges against Huey have to do mainly with state finances, banking and general bribery and corruption. Here's a fair sample of what Mr. Davenport thinks of the situation:

"It is going to take all the influence, actual and alleged, that Huey can muster to stave off a resumption of the investigation. Mr. Parker's charges are not those of a political aspirant; he seeks nothing but an even break for Louisiana, a complete investigation of conditions in a state that Huey has made his private skating rink. Mr. Parker offers to furnish proof that Huey is 'the greatest menace to American decency and civilization, that he knows neither truth, honesty, nor decency'. Mr. Parker's petition to the United States Senate charges that Huey 'has created and maintained in Louisiana a system of corruption and debauchery unparalleled in the history of the state; he has operated a system of so-called racketeering; he has made election a farce; he has declared openly that he controlled our state courts'."

These charges are pretty hot stuff. Davenport and Parker must feel pretty sure of their ground or they would not dare make such statements against a man so strong politically as Huey Long.

WAR ON TERMITES

Scientists in government and private employ are concentrating their research and experiment now in preparation for a war on an insect pest which threatens to destroy American towns and cities. The enemy is the "termite", incorrectly known to many people as the "white ant".

Termites have entered New York City in millions and an alarming picture of their depredations is stirring the scientific world. They have already succeeded in completely destroying a courthouse, a row of houses, several buildings in New Jersey suburbs, a theatre near Times Square, office buildings in downtown Manhattan, quantities of telegraph poles, furniture and fences.

From a scientific staff of an encyclopedia comes the following statement of the seriousness of the new insect attack on New York City: "The worst of the situation is that these termites chew away at wooden structures from the inside, leaving a seemingly healthy exterior. It is only when a piano falls through a floor or a wall collapses that the presence of the enemy is known.

"Researches indicate that nine species of termites have been active for a long time in California, but only one or two of these species have thus far reached New York. In California their depredations include destruction of buildings, oil rigs, power poles, and so on. Concrete has taken the place of wood in most California construction in the devastated areas.

"The termites can be foiled by impregnating timber with cresote, asphalt and various chemicals. But this is an expensive and arduous process The advance of the termites on New York City is therefore a matter of major economic concern."

BEWARE THE BULL

A few days ago a news despatch told of two farmers in this state being attacked by angry bulls. Which brings us face to face with the fact that the "mad-bull" season is here, and carelessness is sure to result in loss of some lives.

Bulls are temperamental beasts. One may be as gentle as a ewe lamb for two years and suddenly turn on its keeper, to gore or stamp him to death. Almost invaritably it is the bull which has "never been ugly" that kills people. The keeper becomes so filled with the idea the animal has always been tractable, he loses sight of the naturally fickle nature of bulls, and in an unguarded moment his property turns to crush him under foot.

Then there is always present danger of bulls that are running free, turning on small children with sudden, death dealing hooves. What is more terrible to anticipate, than an innocent little girl trampled to a horrible death. Could anyone be too careful to prevent such a tragedy? Yet those things happen every season.

Owners of mature bulls owe it to themselves and the public to keep the animals shut up in safe enclosures during the summer months. An ounce of prevention is worth more than a pound of cure in dealing with such potential danger.

Two Important Opinions Will Vindicate Milk Board

Albany, July 18—The Milk Control Board finds itself strongly supported by two legal decisions rendered last week. In one case a man sued by the board for cutting the retail price of milk fixed by it had attacked the constitutionality of the law. The case was carried to the Court of Appeals and the law was declared constitutional. This greatly strengthens the hands of the body which is trying to aid the dairying interests of the state. There was no question of politics in that issue.

Petty Politics in This

There was little else than politics, and of an extremely petty type, in the other issue decided. The bill creating the Milk Board includes a provision that it shall have the right to choose its own employees. This was for the double purpose of saving time and permitting the selection of people with experience in the milk business, who might not be able to answer such questions as are asked in Civil Service examinations. These were naturally about all Republicans, because the large majority of the people of this state who know about dairying are Republicans. That cut no figure, however, with the bureaucratic coterie in Albany which holds it as a crime for a Republican to be on the public payroll, no matter how capable. The removal of the Milk Board's appointees was demanded by them.

* * *

Baldwin Fights Demand

Commissioner Baldwin of the Department of Agriculture and Markets opposed ripping up the competent force which he had been three months in training, and in this was supported by Senator Byrne, Albany Democrat, who declared he personally knew of one man working for the board at $20 a week, who previously held down a position paying nearly $5000 a year. The controversy was submitted to Attorney General Bennett, who ruled that the law must be obeyed, and the competent crew which the milk Board has collected and trained will not be disturbed.

Is Al Getting High Hat?

The friends of Alfred E. Smith fear that he is getting "high hat", now that he has received the degree of Doctor of Laws from Harvard University. The basis of their concern is his latest editorial in "The Outlook". Therein he gives his views of President Roosevelt's Industrial Recovery Act as a means of putting the country back on the road to prosperity. "I may be old-fashioned", he says, "but I can't understand how it can possibly work." He wishes the experiment were being made "in a corner of Alaska or a chunk of the Bad Lands". He says many things which any Republican would be sharply criticised for saying, among them that neither the radicals nor the conservatives will be satisfied and that "both groups are likely to feel that they have been handed the bologna." On reading this latter sentence Al's old friends wept. When a man of the common people uses the aristocratic "bologna" instead of the plebeian "baloney"—well, it is time to fear for the country.

Election Cases a Farce

When Governor Lehman last winter refused to order an investigation of the gross election frauds in New York City the reason he gave was that District Attorney Crain was performing his duty in that respect. Mr. Crain has now completed that "duty" so he says, and the records merely substantiate what nearly everybody knew, namely, that his activity in the cases was solely for the purpose of staving off a real prob and prosecution. Out of 68 election officials indicted, just three have been convicted by juries. Seven others were allowed to plead guilty to lesser charges. Nine ran away and are still missing. Three were acquitted. In some cases the juries disagreed and no steps have been taken for a new trial. Many have not been brought to trial, at all, yet Mr. Crain states that his work is "done". It was, of course, preposterous to expect that crooked Tammany election officials would be honestly and energetically prosecuted by a Tammany District Attorney with juries dominated by Tammany men. Yet Governor Lehman seems to have believed it—or at least evidently expected others to believe it.

Dairymen Delay Buying New Herds

G. C. Bradt Says Cattle Are Available in New York State to Replace the 26,000 Head Lost in Tests Since May 1.

The present supply of dairy cows in New York state exceeds the demand, according to C. G. Bradt of the state college of agriculture. Many county farm bureaus report large numbers of cows listed for sale with few buyers making inquiries. However, he says, more cows will probably be sold in the next few months than in the past few weeks.

The movement of dairy cattle from the surplus areas to counties in central and southeastern New York, where intensive tuberculin testing is in progress, has increased steadily since May 1. The supply still exceeds the demand. Steuben, Allegany. Chautauqua, Cattaraugus, Livingston, Tioga and Oswego counties have shipped many cattle. Steuben county reports shipments of 3,000 head of cattle in the past few months, with liberal supplies still on hand. Oneida, Chenango and Cortland counties report liberal listings but few inquiries from buyers.

Twenty-six thousand head of cattle have been condemned since May 1. Many dairymen have not replaced their herds. Some have bought a few cattle and plan to buy more when they receive the state and federal indemnity payments; others are waiting to buy fall freshening cows. Although many dairymen have not replaced their herds, Mr. Bradt says, several thousand head will be replaced and these replacements are available in New York state.

Tells How She Lost 15 Lbs. of Fat

Rheumatism Gone Too

Here is a woman who was rapidly putting on weight and who was troubled with rheumatism too. Read her letter:

"I started taking Kruschen Salts because of the good it had done for a friend of mine who had been crippled with rheumatism. At the end of the second bottle I was weighed and find I am now only 148 pounds (original weight 163 lbs.), at which I am so pleased. But I have also felt my rheumatism much less, which has been so troublesome in my knees. I must say I think Kruschen is a splendid weight reducer". (Miss) E. L. P.

Overweight and rheumatic poisoning often go together. The six salts of Kruschen assist the internal organs to perform their functions properly—little by little that ugly fat goes; slowly, yes—but surely. You feel wonderfully healthy, youthful and energetic — more so than ever before in your life!

Kruschen Salts is obtainable at all drug stores — a jar lasts four weeks and costs not more than 85c.

Eighteenth Installment

Synopsis: Joyce Ashton, poor stenographer, suffered loss of memory in a skidding taxicab accident in Chicago. One morning two years later she woke, after a fall from her horse, her memory restored, to find herself, as Frills, the wife of Neil Packard, rich California fruit packer. She determined to tell nobody of her predicament but set about learning what she could of her life in the interval. From the conversation of her friends and letters in her desk she gathered that she had been a heartless, pleasure-loving young woman. One letter that troubled her was from a woman signing herself sophie, blaming Frills for not giving a home to a baby Sophie was caring for. Could it be her baby, Frills wondered! She also found herself involved in an affair with a man named Maitland. In San Francisco, where she went while her husband was away on business, she met Robert Ainsworth, a poet whose work she had always admired. When Joyce returned home, she decided to be pleasanter to Neil than Frills had been. But this line was dangerous, too, for Neil was pathetically anxious to win back her love. At his request they call upon Neil's mother, whom Joyce finds adorable. Later, she met the poet, Robert Ainsworth, and several times stopped for lunch at his cabin when she was horseback riding. One day he started to make love to her. Later Joyce and Neil, out riding, cornered, Joyce makes full confession,—her loss of memory and its restoration. When Neil accuses Joyce and Ainsworth of being in love, Ainsworth makes a "graceless" exit, leaving Joyce to explain. Neil is hurt but upon arriving at home is called to his mother's home. Joyce decides she must go away.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

Writing to Neil was difficult:

"Dear Neil", she finally wrote: "I'm going away—forgive me, but it seems the only thing to do. I know how you feel about facing me after all we've been through today. When you wrote me that you would 'camp out somewhere else tonight' I quite understood. Please don't think I blame you—all the fault is mine from beginning to end—but I couldn't bear to be the cause of making your home repellent to you. Nor could I bear to see you being chivalrous and pretending that you wanted me here when you didn't! You can see there's nothing else for me to do. I'm not going to Robert Ainsworth of course — don't think that. I am now enjoying the bitterness of my mistake about him. I'll go to San Francisco, and perhaps there I can make some plan about my life. I'm taking about $100 I have in cash, and some day I'll pay you back."

Joyce hesitated when she reached that point. She wanted to tell Neil how awfully much she appreciated his niceness, his kindness, to Frills, but she felt she simply couldn't let herself go on this subject. So she ended briefly, "I'll get in touch with you before long, Neil, because you'll want to be getting a divorce and I shan't stand in your way. Joyce

Sam was warming up the motor of the Dusenburg; she could hear it purrr outside the long French windows.

Joyce flung herself down on the davenport and stifled her sobs in a pillow. "Oh, Dickey", she said as a soft little nose insinuated itself into her clenched palm, "Why should I feel so utterly wretched about the only decent thing I've done since I've been in this house? I don't want to go, Dicky, I really don't want to leave at all!"

Joyce had Sam take her to the Y. W. C. A. in which she had previously stayed in San Francisco, but she remained there only over night ,feeling that if Neil pressed Sam very hard he might tell here whereabouts, and he might tell her whereabouts, and

"I know Neil will feel that he should make every effort to find me", she thought, "but it'll be better if he doesn't succeed".

Joyce found it harder to get a job than she had supposed. After installing herself in a cheap rooming house under the name of "Florence Hilton" (to make it easier perhaps for Neil to get his divorce) she set out to find employment.

She took to reading the Want-Ads in the daily papers, but she could get up no interest in the kind of work they offered. She found that the luxury of living as Mrs. Neil Packard had sapped her courage, and left her less able to face hard work and uncomfortable living conditions. Her room filled her with horror; she was actually unhappy every moment she had to spend in it.

She began to wonder what she would do when all her money was spent.

Somewhat sadly, she let her mind open itself to thoughts of Robert Ainsworth. She had tried to banish him but could not quite; persistently the thought of him would thrust itself up, only to be persistently ignored. She had but one conclusion to reach, and that was that he had failed her, that he had shown himself lacking in chivalry and courage, that perhaps . . . he . . . did . . . not . . . love . . . her.

To Joyce this was too bitter for tears, too bitter for complaint. She could not hold her head up under the shame of it.

When the hundred dollars was so nearly gone that Joyce was seized with a feeling of sudden panic, she shook off her lethargic mood and, striking out wildly for employment, seized upon a position as file clerk in a large paper concern. The work could not have been less interesting or less profitable, but in her disorganized state its very dullness was beneficial to her. She kept to herself, finding that the other girls were suspicious of her finer clothes. It amused her to wonder what they would think if they knew how she really got them!

One day, less than a week after she had begun her job, Joyce was leaving the office at five-thirty in company with two of the other girls, with whom she was exchanging desultory remarks, when a familiar voice made her tremble.

"Oh, Mrs. Packard, Mrs. Packard!" It was Sam, calling to her from the Dusenberg, which he steered quickly to the curb and stopped. "Gee, I'm glad I found you!" He was out in a moment and holding the door for her, and Joyce, too befuddled to think of the amazement of the office girls, or even to remember to bid them good-bye, climbed in.

No Need to Hold Wheat For Plan

Growers May Sell Crop at Any Time or in Any Way They Choose and Still be Eligible for Federal Compensation Payments.

New York state farmers who plan to cooperate in the wheat adjustment program may sell their wheat at any time or in any way they choose and still be eligible for the compensation payments, according to M. L. Wilson, chief of the wheat production section of the agricultural adjustment administration.

The administration offers adjustment payments on the 1933, 1934 and 1935 crops to wheat growers who contract to reduce their acreage in 1934 and 1935. The amount of the adjustment payment will be approximately the difference between the current market price and the price on the pre-war basis, he says. It will be offered on the proportion of each farmer's past average production which is normally used as human food in the United States. The exact amount of the acreage reduction is to be determined by the secretary of agriculture, but it is not expected to exceed twenty per cent of the grower's average production for a past period, probably the three years 1930 to 1932.

Mr. Wilson points out that, under the plan, to be eligible for the adjustment payments the grower must join the plan and agree to reduce his acreage. Two-thirds of the allotment payment will be made this fall and the remainder in the spring. The plan to be followed in New York state will be announced in late July following the meeting of representatives of several eastern states in Columbus, O, July 10 and 11, and at a meeting of New York wheat growers in Rochester.

Need Haymakers In Potato Field

Professor Hardenburg Says Weeder Cuts Cultivation Costs — Spuds Should Not Wait Until After Harvest.

One of the worst enemies of the New York state potato crops is the hay crop, according to Professor E. V. Hardenburg of the state college of agriculture. This is because hay harvest usually comes when weeds need attention in the potato field, and if the weeds get a start during haying, the weed problem is expensive and difficult afterwards.

If a weeder can be used twice before haying, most of the weeds can be killed when in the seedling stage. Fewer cultivations will be needed later in the season and the more harmful, or deep cultivations, can be avoided. Cost studies of 129 western New York farms showed, that, on the average, it cost $1.34 to cultivate an acre of potatoes once. The cost when a weeder was used was lower than for inter-row cultivation, and fewer cultivations were necessary.

Ordinarily, he says, weeds that develop later in the season should be covered rather than removed because covering gives less injury to the plants. When covering is necessary, some ridging is justified. The wide-bottomed, flat topped, shallow type or ridge is recommended. The ridge should be made gradually, he says, to conserve the roots.

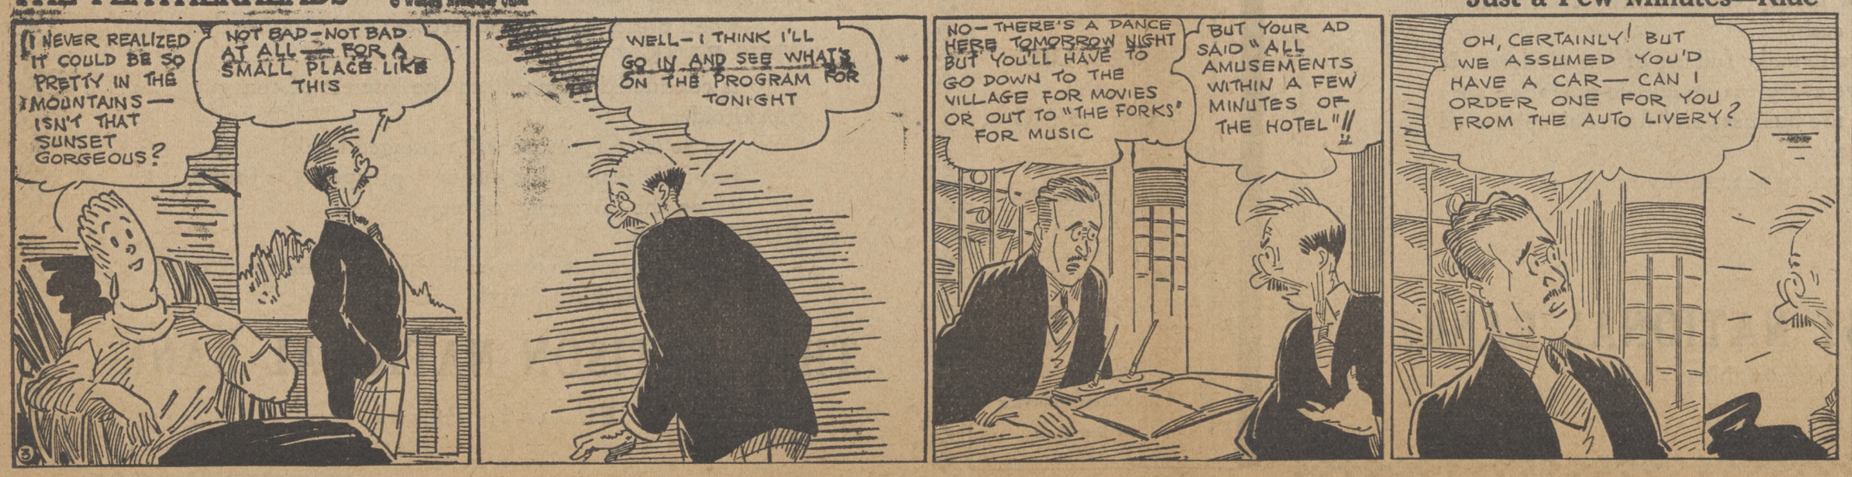
THE FEATHERHEADS By Osborne



I NEVER REALIZED IT COULD BE SO PRETTY IN THE MOUNTAINS— ISN'T THAT SUNSET GORGEOUS?
NOT BAD—NOT BAD AT ALL—FOR A SMALL PLACE LIKE THIS WELL—I THINK I'LL GO IN AND SEE WHAT'S ON THE PROGRAM FOR TONIGHT
NO—THERE'S A DANCE HERE TOMORROW NIGHT BUT YOU'LL HAVE TO GO DOWN TO THE VILLAGE FOR MOVIES OR OUT TO "THE FORKS" FOR MUSIC
BUT YOUR AD SAID "ALL AMUSEMENTS WITHIN A FEW MINUTES OF THE HOTEL"!!
Just a Few Minutes—Ride
OH, CERTAINLY! BUT WE ASSUMED YOU'D HAVE A CAR—CAN I ORDER ONE FOR YOU FROM THE AUTO LIVERY?
WE SHOULD HAVE GONE TO BERMUDA—THEN WE COULD HAVE USED BICYCLES

Success springs from 25 per cent inspiration and 75 per cent perspiration.
